

Scope Creep

Another way to minimize scope creep risk is having an experienced bioenergy expert on your side, with experience in designing, permitting, and constructing organic waste systems, that has your sole interests in mind. Let's face it - no matter how strong your relationships are with your team members, when issues arise, all parties have to protect their own interests. With Cavanaugh serving as your Implementation consultant, or Owner's Agent, you can be confident that your interests are represented by a team of experts with rich technical depth and experience. This will provide you with faster dispute resolution, arriving at resolutions quicker, and saving you money while getting what you need.